Target Audience

The educational design of this activity addresses the needs of oncologists, nurse practitioners, and physician assistants involved in the treatment of patients with breast cancer.

Statement of Need/Program Overview

Advances in targeted therapies, immunotherapies, and biomarker-driven care have transformed oncology, yet adoption of precision medicine remains inconsistent—particularly in community settings and among underserved populations facing barriers to screening, diagnosis, and access to novel treatments. Ongoing gaps in biomarker testing, treatment sequencing, and multidisciplinary coordination highlight the need for evidence-based CME.

The University of Illinois Cancer Center serves a diverse, medically underserved population with persistent cancer disparities. This activity aims to equip clinicians with practical, evidence-based strategies in precision diagnostics, treatment selection, toxicity management, and equitable cancer care to improve patient outcomes.

Educational Objectives

After completing this activity, the participant should be better able to:

- Review updated clinical evidence and guideline recommendations to treatment sequencing and planning
- Identify biomarker-driven decision-making into patient management.
- Identify treatment-related toxicities using current best practices.
- Explain how to improve multidisciplinary coordination across oncology specialties.
- Discuss how to address disparities in cancer care affecting hard-to-reach populations.
